

Biography of Amélie de Montchalin

A graduate of HEC Paris and Paris-Dauphine University in economics, as well as Paris IV-Sorbonne University in history, Amélie de Montchalin holds a master's degree in public administration from the Harvard Kennedy School.

She began her career as an economist, primarily in the financial sector.

Elected as a member of the National Assembly for Essonne in 2017 and a member of the Finance Committee, she was appointed Secretary of State for European Affairs in 2019, then Minister for Public Service Transformation and Civil Service in 2020. In 2022, she was appointed Minister of Ecological Transition and Territorial Cohesion, and later served as Ambassador and Permanent Representative of France to the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD). She served as Minister of Public Action and Accounts from 2024 to 2026.

Since February 23, 2026, Amélie de Montchalin has served as First President of the Cour des comptes, the French supreme audit institution. She chairs the High Council of Public Finance and the Council on Compulsory Levies.

Amélie de Montchalin is married and the mother of three children.